Good sound was not transmitted except under heavy pressure, and all attempts to obtain satisfactory measurements failed on account of the well-known disturbances set up in the microphone by the current itself. In certain of our experiments the resistance of the primary circuit was diminished by joining a number of cells in parallel. The uniform result was, that the sound transmitted was louder. The results of our experiments may be summed up as follows: --The resistance of the primary circuit, and especially that of the battery, should be as low as possible; the pressure at the contact should be no greater than is required to transmit good sound, --that is, it should be a little greater than that required to give the maximum current; with the present form of Blake contact, no electro-motive force greater than 2 volts should be used; and, finally, the contact should be carefully guarded against jarring. Our work should be considered, not as a complete investigation, but as part of the foundation for future work in the Rogers Laboratory; for our results have been more in the invention of methods than in the use of them. We trust that the work in which we have had a share may be successfully carried out in the future. Rogers Laboratory Of Physics, January, 1888. XVI.
