NOTES, CORRESPONDENCE AND REMARKS. NOTE NO. I. General Lee not Surprised. AS to the claim that Hooker surprised General Lee by his flank movement, by moving up the river, there is some doubt about it. Pleasanton states in Scribners Magazine (Vol. III. , p. 173), that he captured at Germania Ford an engineer officer of General Stuarts staff, with a big diary, in which it was stated that the first week in March a council of war had been held at General Stuarts headquarters, that Jackson, Hill, Ewell and Stuart were present, that the conference lasted five hours, and that it was there decided that in their opinion the next battle would take place at or near Chancellorsville. General Colston also has stated in his article in Scribners Magazine that General Lee was not surprised by Hookers movement, but expected the attack to come from the direction of the United States Ford. Longstreet states in his late work that it was originally the intention of the Confederates, if attacked, to remain in their entrenchments around Fredericksburg until he could return with his force from south of Petersburg, and it was estimated that the 60, 000 men entrenched were equal to Hookers entire army. NOTE NO. 2. Strength of the Two Armies. The Army of the Potomac had on its rolls, the 30th of April, just before the advance movement, about 130, 000 men, for duty and equipped, exclusive of the Provost Guard. The exact...
